

Dick Kolter Continues to Teach Through His Gift

Dick Kolter was a quiet man who lived modestly. He had a number of interests - amateur radio, trains, and the railroad, in fact he was a skilled engineer who volunteered driving a scenic train in Wisconsin on the weekends. For nearly five decades he was the groundskeeper at Westfield Golf Course in Winona. He took pride in keeping the grounds in prime condition. But the thing he loved most was teaching math to students in the Winona Public Schools, He did that for more than 30 years. So, after his unexpected death in December 2010, it was no surprise that he left almost his entire estate to the Winona Area Public Schools. That legacy will help his beloved students reach their potential for years to come... just as Dick did when he was alive.
